In this 8-hour workshop, Brett Lloyd, Spartan Consulting*, will provide guidance and technical assistance to County Superintendents while they edit and develop their County-wide School Emergency Operations Plan (EOP). Many County Superintendents have small, rural schools within their jurisdictions. The workshop will provide superintendents guidance for directing these small rural school districts in developing subsections to the Schools' County-wide EOP. This model will allow small rural school districts to focus their efforts on only those pertinent subsections, while still adhering to the Schools' County-wide plan. Participants' County Disaster and Emergency Services (DES) Coordinators are also invited to the training to assist in addressing key components shared between the County Superintendents' EOP and the County DES' EOPs. Participants will leave the session with additional resources, provided on jump drives and through handouts, to continue the development and implementation of their plans.
